WHO WE ARE
AND WHAT WE DO

What is the BSHR?

The British Society for the History of Radiology (BSHR) is an independent body (formerly the Radiology History and Heritage Charitable Trust) which aims to:

- initiate and sustain activities directed towards locating, conserving and recording artefacts, literature and other items relating to the discovery of X-rays and other imaging methods and the development of medical and dental radiology and radiation oncology in the UK.
- foster public awareness of the far reaching consequences of the discovery of X-rays and other imaging methods and their application for medicine and mankind.

Membership is open to everyone with an interest in the subject.

Membership benefits:

- Regular journal, The Invisible Light, including articles of interest and updates about our work
- Information about events, articles and items of historical interest
- Regular invitations to present and publish historical articles
- Opportunity to participate in a network of enthusiasts and experts in the field of radiology history
- The opportunity to attend and vote at the AGM
- Eligibility to nominate members of Council
- Eligibility for associate membership of the British Society for the History of Medicine

Supporting professional bodies are:

- The British Institute of Radiology (BIR)
- The Royal College of Radiologists (RCR)
- The Society and College of Radiographers (SCoR)
- The Institute of Physics and Engineering in Medicine (IPEM)
- The Wellcome Institute
- The British Society of Dental & Maxillo-Facial Radiology (BSDMFR)
- The Scottish Radiological Society (SRS)
- The Society for Radiological Protection
